April 12, 2016

Dear Representative,

Americans for Financial Reform<sup>1</sup> urges you to oppose HR 1261 or any similar bills to undermine the independence of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) by subjecting it to the appropriations process. It is less than five years since the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) was established. Since then, the CFPB has fulfilled Congress's vision of a federal agency with "the authority and accountability to ensure that existing consumer protection laws and regulations are comprehensive, fair, and vigorously enforced."<sup>2</sup> Through its rulemaking, supervision, enforcement, and consumer education and complaint system, the CFPB has made enormous strides in ensuring that the financial marketplace is fair to consumers. Its enforcement efforts alone have resolved more than 80 cases and secured $11.2 billion in relief for consumers.

Independent funding is a common characteristic of the federal bank regulatory agencies. Like the other federal bank regulators – the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), and the Federal Reserve – the CFPB does not receive appropriations. While other bank regulators have mechanisms to increase their own independent funding, only the CFPB's budget is capped by Congress. The CFPB has spent these funds prudently. In FY2015, the CFPB spent $524.4 million, 17% less than its Congressionally-authorized cap of $631.7 million, and CFPB has returned to consumers more than four times more money than it has spent over its entire history. CFPB spending is also subject to extensive oversight through semi-annual testimony before each house of Congress's committee of jurisdiction, annual Government Accountability Office audits, and frequent reports by the Inspector General.

As the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) previously recognized, any cost savings from the bill are illusory. The 2014 CBO score of similar legislation introduced last Congress assumed that no money would be spent by the CFPB after 2016.<sup>3</sup> Recognizing that fact, the CBO concluded that the appropriations for the continued operations of the agency over the 10-year period would consume the entirety of the scored savings.

We urge you to oppose this bill and any similar proposals designed to hobble the CFPB and prevent it from enforcing the consumer protection laws with predictable, independent funding.
